QUESTIONS OF PRECEDENCE

And of Ancient Rights were argued at Length Before the Court of Claims.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Parchments yellowed with age and rare old prints played an important part in the Court of Coronation Claims, which has been holding its sessions this week.

Questions of precedence and ancient rights were argued at considerable length. In some cases claimants appeared in person to tell the Court why they were entitled to the place contended for in the coronation ceremonies.

One of the most interesting figures in the court room the other day was the Archbishop of York, who, standing up in his fur lined overcoat, asserted his claim to a position in accord with his dignity in the Church and realm and to the right to crown the Queen.

Sir Forrest Fulton, Recorder of the City of London, urged the claim of the Lord Mayor and the citizens of London to attend the coronation and to bear the crystal sceptre or mace.

For the honor of being hereditary standard bearer of Scotland there were three claimants—the Earl of Lauderdale, Mr. Henry Scrymgeour Wedderburn and the Rev. R. Scrymgeour. The family history was gone over and the arguments lasted three hours. At the end the Lord Chancellor declared that while he had listened carefully he was unable to understand the arguments.

The Earl of Huntingdon made a claim to bear the sword of state and a claim was made by the corporation of Weymouth to be present by representation at the ceremony under a charter of Edward IV.

Most of the claims were referred to the King for final settlement.

GEORGE ADE'S MODERN FABLES.

The Lady Who Lived Down Her Past by Main Force

Once there was a large Family of Girls in an out-of-the-way Town. The Family was up against it about four-thirds of the Time and the Girls had to Shift for themselves. One of these Girls did a short line of Kitchen Work for a time in order to side-step the Poor-House. Later on she led to the Altar an industrious Young Fellow who took her up to the City, where they did very well. She began to wear all kinds of Clothes and drop her R's and do the Heavy, but she could not get away from her Past. She remembered that she had juggled the Wills-Irons and rinsed the Dishes for 35 Sestrees per Week and if Society ever heard about it, she to the Discredit. So in order to allay Suspicion and prove that there was a Chasm between her and any Kitchen Mechanic, she used to roast the Help.

One of her favorite Occupations was to walk up and down a Recent Arrival from Germany or Scandinavia's. With the Irish she had to be a little more Careful. But she worked the Lady Act so hard that she had to send to the Intelligence Office for a new batch of Menials every Day or two. She was so haughty and hity-ti that sometimes she almost jollied herself into the Belief that she never had been a Hired Girl at all.

She flattered herself that she could jump on a Servant in a Manner that would have done Credit to any of the First Famillier. When her Husband rebuked her for calling down the Maid in the Presence of Callers she reminded him that very often a Working Girl thinks she is as good as any one else unless she is Squelched.

Moral:—It is impossible to pa'm off Poor Service on a Graduate.
